

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of the Wedding Plans for Lieutenant Reginald Hutchinson—She Expects a Large Attendance at the Ball Triumphant

THE wedding dates are coming on, are they not? And the first Easter week wedding we hear of is Reginald Hutchinson's. He is to marry Vera McNair, of New York, you know, and the wedding will, of course, take Monday and in St. Thomas's Church, which seems to be the fashionable Episcopal church in New York. Vera is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McNair, of 5 East Seventy-ninth street, New York. She came out three or four years ago and is, of course, a member of the Junior League and all the other "spiffy" associations of the younger set belong to. Those who have met her tell me she is very good-looking and has a great deal of personal charm. Reginald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Hutchinson and a brother of Danny Hutchinson, 3d. Both sons have been in the service and have fine records. I am sure the wedding will be a very pretty affair. St. Thomas's Church seems to have been made a wonderful background for weddings, don't you think?

IT'S REALLY very much interested in the coming "Ball Triumphant," aren't you? You see, it's not only going to be a party "whereat" you dance yourself, but there are to be specialty exhibition dances and vaudeville stunts now and again through the evening in the ballroom. If you don't want to see the stunts you can dance in the Red Room or the Clover Room or wherever there are other orchestras stationed, and they tell me you'll almost fall over the orchestras, there are to be so many and such fine ones on this auspicious occasion. I wonder how the drive for the Temple of Victory is going on? I have not heard recently, but I have no doubt that it is successful, with all those energetic Emergency Aiders back of it.

The overseas committee of the E. A. is back of the ball, so we'll be sure to see some wonderful clothes, for Mrs. Billie Clothier always dresses beautifully. Mrs. John Norris is another regular fashion plate. Mrs. Altemus and Mrs. Campbell Madeira, too, you know, always wear stunning gowns, and so does Mrs. William Warden, and they are all on the committee. The tickets are to be inexpensive, so that nearly every one who cares to go will be able to purchase one, and I, for one, expect a very good time.

I HEAR that Dorothy Painter, Katherine Putnam, Esther Campbell and Katherine Roberts are all going down to Annapolis today, chaperoned by Mrs. William Campbell, Jr. They are to spend the week-end and attend the Washington's Birthday hop and festivities. It is needless to say there is much excitement in the heads of these young people in consequence of so much fun in the offing, for it certainly is great to go down there; you have the most wonderful time.

DID YOU hear that Fritz Drayton had been transferred from the Polyclin-Hospital in New York to the Colonial Hospital near Rahway, in New Jersey? You know I told you he had come back from France several weeks ago and was in a New York hospital. His leg must have been pretty badly injured, for it is taking quite a little time to cure; but it is on the mend and a permanent cure is promised. And after all, one does not mind waiting a long time if the cure is to be a real one in the end.

SOPHIE NORRIS will be a busy person next Tuesday, won't she? She's going to talk at the Independence Square Red Cross that afternoon about her canteen work in France. And that evening she is going to take a leading part in the Plays and Players' club night. It's to be French play night, you know, but the plays will be spoken in English. Sophie will play in "They," by Maurice Donnay. She will impersonate Helene and Phil Castner will be Achille, while Elizabeth Boyd will appear as the bride and Frank Shellenberger as the bridegroom.

The first playlet will be "Indian Summer," by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halévy. (Ludovic Halévy: How I go back to school days, when the first French book I was able to translate was "Abbe Constantin.")

In "Indian Summer" will appear Kate Beeler, who will take the part of Adrienne; Brieuxville will be Mr. Henry Schaffer, Jr.; Noel, Mr. Raymond Robinson, and Mme. Le Breton, Mrs. Charles Whitcomb.

I FOR one expect a good time at both affairs on Tuesday, for I would not miss the talk at the Red Cross. You see, it's a fine way to work for the refugees—ply your needle and listen while you work to interesting stories and experiences told by those who have been right on the spot over there; and then the Plays and Players is always delightful.

BY THE way, I hear that Frances Clark, Rachel Baker, Betty Elliot and Agnes Irwin have all arrived on the other side safely; that Frances Clark and Rachel are to remain in England for a while, but Betty and Agnes Irwin have gone on to France. It's a splendid thing, it seems to me, for them to go over now when the glory of working in wartime is over, but the men need the women from home more than ever. As Mrs. Rinehart said the other day at the Independence Square Auxiliary, "The men need to keep up their morale more than ever, now that time is dragging and they are homesick and have not the excitement of battle, and there's nothing to keep up their morale like the clear-eyed, trim American girl, with her common sense and clear judgment."

Three cheers for the girls who are working now and who will probably not have any glory about it!

PHILOPATRIAN BALL TO HAVE MILITARY AIR

Distinguished Army and Navy Personages Will Attend Reception on March 3

The annual reception of the Catholic Philopatrian Literary Institute, to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel Monday night, March 3, will be distinctly military in its tone.

Distinguished military and naval personages have accepted the invitation of the Philopatrians to be their guests for the evening and all members who have been or still are members of the military forces of the nation will be present in uniform.

Tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse, 1411-13 Arch street, Municipal Court Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, chairman of the ball committee, will make public announcement about several new features planned for the function. The ball committee will meet to discuss these plans and final arrangements will be made.

Noted jurists will be present as guests. Invitations have been extended to many prominent jurists throughout the state and already acceptances are at hand from the members of the local bench.

Members of the various foreign military missions now in the United States have accepted invitations, and prominent officers of the United States army, navy and marine corps will be in attendance.

The reception will be the fifty-second annual event of its kind in the history of the Catholic Philopatrian Literary Institute. It will be the final pre-Lenten activity in local Catholic circles and is usually regarded as the final big social event of the season. This year, because of the termination of the Lenten season and the general feeling of happiness and thanksgiving which prevails, it promises to be unusually auspicious.

The Catholic Philopatrian Literary Institute during the year past has made an enviable war record. Scores of its members have been in the United States army and navy and many achieved fame. It has contributed largely to war-welfare work, and the proceeds from the annual reception of last year were devoted to the work done by the Knights of Columbus.

During the year the members ungrudgingly abandoned their clubhouse and their privileges in order that they might support their clubhouse at 1411-13 Arch street might become a place of rest and comfort for the military and naval service of the nation. No effort has been made to raise funds for the work and the annual reunion this year will aid in a practical way the work that the club has been and is continuing to carry on.

The ball committee is headed by Municipal Court Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell and James H. Herron, president of the club. The secretary is Joseph F. Conroy, Jr. and the treasurer is James F. Conroy, Jr.

$100 PRIZE FOR ART WORK

Academy Fellowship to Reward Best Offering at Exhibition

The Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts will award a prize of $100 for the best work in painting or sculpture in the 1414th annual exhibition by a member of the fellowship who has been a regularly registered student in the academy for the last ten years.

The eligible list includes twenty-one paintings and three sculptures. The exhibit of the academy will be held at the Art Alliance, 1822 Walnut street, from March 6 to 20, inclusive. A private view will be given Thursday, March 6, from 4 to 7 o'clock. After the exhibition the pictures will be shown in nearby towns.

Though the exhibition will be smaller than in previous years, owing to war conditions, the quality is expected to be high. The exhibits will be for sale. The chairman of the committee is C. Yarnall Abbott.

To Wed on Tuesday

The wedding of Miss Rose Hay Rabinowitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Rabinowitz, of 1821 North Thirty-third street, to Mr. Sydney Fabian Marcus will take place on Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock in Mercantile Hall. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Marvin Nathan, of the Beth Israel Synagogue. The bridegroom will be attended by Mr. Eugene Landman, Mr. Henry Haas, Mr. Allan Wiener, Mr. Albert Drefuss, Mr. Stuart Rains and Mr. Alvan Goodman.

After a wedding trip to Palm Beach the bride couple will be at home after March 7 at 3839 North Seventeenth street. Miss Rabinowitz is well known in musical circles. She has been active in war and charity work. Mr. Marcus is also well known and popular. He is one of the younger business men of Philadelphia and has also taken an active part in the various wartime activities.

For some seven years now the Three Arts Club has been going along quietly, steadily fulfilling its purposes and steadily growing in its sphere of influence. It was founded in 1912 and incorporated in 1916. It already has outgrown one clubhouse, at 250 South Seventeenth street, and has reached a size where the present commodious house at 1219 Locust street is entirely inadequate for its needs.

There are nineteen girl students living at the Locust street clubhouse. If the Three Arts Club had a building large enough there are at least fifty girls who would avail themselves of its opportunities, it is said. As Philadelphia grows in fame as an art center, the number of students to find a home in the club naturally will increase. As its officers view it, there is no end to the good work the club can do.

Bishop Rhinlander, of the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, is honorary president of the club. Its founder and active president is Mrs. J. Harry Mulliner. She conceived the project of establishing a club that would be a home of the most desirable type for girl art students coming here from a distance. She brought the project to fulfillment largely through her own efforts, and she has kept it going by the devotion of a large amount of her time and personal service.

Widely Known as Author Mrs. Mulliner, who is widely known as an author and a reader of the classics here and abroad, belongs to the Browning Societies of this city and New York, to the Orators' Association and the American Playgoers' Association. She has surrounded herself in the management of the club with women widely known in the city's social and artistic life.

Besides Mrs. Mulliner, the officers of the club are: Miss Collette J. Beckner, first vice president; Mrs. J. Howard Heber, second vice president; Miss Ames Clum Quinlan, third vice president; Mrs. Arjuna Holmes Edwards, fourth vice president; and Mrs. A. W. Kelsey, fifth vice president. Mrs. John Jack is secretary, Miss Mary Ewing Taylor corresponding secretary and Dr. Anna M. Hand treasurer.

Among the prominent women active in the management of the club are Mrs. Barclay Robinson, Mrs. Charles O. Hadley, Mrs. L. D. Edwards, Mrs. John H. Irvin, Mrs. John M. Okie, Mrs. A. Edward Newton, Mrs. Charles Leavitt, Mrs. Z. Montgomery Gibson, Mrs. Herbert E. Diller and Mrs. Howard Longstreth.

THREE ARTS CLUB IS SEEKING BIGGER HOME AND MEMBERSHIP

Present Quarters on Locust Street Inadequate for Purposes of the Organization—The Expansion Plan, It is Believed, Will Be Boon for Girl Students Coming to This City

Philadelphia's Three Arts Club is seeking bigger quarters and bigger membership. Having attained the two, its officers promise students who come here seeking an art education bigger opportunities for artistic culture and development. They forecast also a bigger artistic outlook for the city itself.

The Three Arts Club is connected intimately with Philadelphia's artistic present and future. It is not in itself a large organization, save in its purpose and influence. But it fills a large part in the lives of the girl students who come here from all over the country to perfect themselves in music, in the graphic arts, in drama and in arts and crafts generally.

In a word, the purpose of the club is to furnish a home for the girl art student in Philadelphia. The reason for its existence is tersely stated in its constitution, "The Three Arts Club of the city of Philadelphia is an international, nonsectarian Christian organization. Its object is to establish a residential club for young women engaged in the study of music, painting and the drama—including the arts and crafts. Also to create and strengthen an active center for students and patrons of these arts in the city of Philadelphia. Also to maintain a sinking fund to be used only in the case of a young student, with pronounced ability, with little or no means."

Sphere of Influence Expanded For some seven years now the Three Arts Club has been going along quietly, steadily fulfilling its purposes and steadily growing in its sphere of influence. It was founded in 1912 and incorporated in 1916. It already has outgrown one clubhouse, at 250 South Seventeenth street, and has reached a size where the present commodious house at 1219 Locust street is entirely inadequate for its needs.

THOUSANDS ARE EAGER TO HEAR "BILLY" SUNDAY

Application for Tickets for Metropolitan Opera House Meeting Overwhelms Committee

Nearly 30,000 persons according to J. Lewis Twaddell, want to attend the "Billy" Sunday meeting Monday night in the Metropolitan Opera House. The theatre can accommodate only 4,000.

Since it was first announced the evangelist was to speak at a mass-meeting in the interests of the business men's war council of the Pocket Testament League the demand for tickets has been overwhelming. Even the police department has joined in the universal request for admissions. Sunday made many friends among the Philadelphia policemen during his evangelistic campaign a few years ago in this city.

Sunday is conducting an evangelistic campaign in Richmond, Va. Upon his arrival he will be met by a reception committee, which includes Joseph M. Steele, president of the business men's war council; G. Percy Fox, Mr. Twaddell, Alan Sutherland and others. Joseph M. Steele will preside at the meeting. There will be brief addresses by George T. B. Davis, the Rev. E. W. Rushton and W. Herbert Rue, field workers who will go to Europe to distribute the League's literature. More than 300,000 men have received copies of the Scriptures.

"Billy" Sunday will speak on a subject of his own selection. He will refer to the work of the business men's war council as being instrumental in saving 100,000 soldiers and sailors from a hand for Christmas.

The only challenge needed to the people is that they prove themselves men and women," declared Mrs. Raymond Robins, of Chicago, last evening in a lecture at the Friends' Select School, Sixteenth and Cherry streets, on "Woman and the New World."

She felt the same spirit was paramount among the foreign-born Americans here as was exhibited on the fields of Flanders, and the hope of the parents was in the future of their children.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY GIVES PLAY

Cercle Francais Produces "Les Petits Martyrs de France" for War Orphans

The glory, horror, humor and pathos of war were depicted in "Les Petits Martyrs de France" (The Little Martyrs of France), a victory charity revue in French, given last night by the Cercle Francais of Temple University in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford. The proceeds of the affair will go to the fatherless children of France committee of the Emergency Aid.

A brilliant assemblage of members of the French colony, prominent Philadelphia men and women and students and alumni of Temple University crowded the auditorium and greatly enjoyed the performance. A military touch was lent the aspect of the audience by a group of French sailors and by a number of American soldiers and sailors, who acted as ushers.

The play, a novel combination of symbolic tableaux and dialogue, was written by Mrs. William Mande, occurring on a square in Paris. It centered around the vivified statues of Jeanne d'Arc and Lafayette. The scenes, calculated to bring home to Americans the plight of the little war orphans, showed vividly the cruelty perpetrated upon defenseless children and women by the Germans, both in France and in English towns that were bombed by airplanes and Zeppelins.

Three little girls, seated upon the stage, represented three French orphans who have been "adopted" by Temple University. Marion Trillingham played the part of Jeanne d'Arc, Frank C. Becker was Lafayette and James McEwell was seen as the most popular character of the evening, General Ferehugh. A ballet followed the play and a dance was given at the close of the show.

Captain F. Baldensperger, professor of French culture at Columbia University, delivered an address in which he paid a high tribute to the fortitude of Premier Clemenceau. A short speech was also given by Lieutenant Andre Drot, of the French high commission and the "Blue Devils."

GIVE COLORFUL BALL

Mrs. Wurtz's Dancing Class Holds Brilliant Affair at Bellevue-Stratford

Sparkling gaiety and a kaleidoscopic array of brilliant colors were the features of the annual fancy dress ball of Mrs. Charles Stewart Wurtz's dancing class last night in the roof garden of the Bellevue-Stratford. Novelty of costumes, pretty faces and graceful dances were the chief attractions. The attention of a small, representative gathering of spectators.

More than 500 young men and women and boys and girls attended the ball. Veiled and ornate beauties mingled with Spanish toreadors, French flower girls, Uncle Sams, pierrettes, cowboys, colonial belles and little school girls and sailors of all the nations. The cotillions were led by William Henry Addicks, Thomas B. Nelson, Jr., George E. Gibbs, Jr., John McArthur Harris and Edward Parsons, Francis Farnum.

RHODES MEN IN THE WAR

Twenty Scholars Killed in Action Last Year of Conflict

London, Feb. 22.—The annual report in connection with the Rhodes scholarships is only nine months after the Allies won the war, and of whom four had previously been in active service in the war and two had been medically rejected for military service.

Of fifty scholars elected for 1917 forty-six took up military service, two were medically rejected and accepted government employment and two were otherwise employed.
